

A gig in Kindwitwi!

While on holiday in Tanzania with my two girls, Amy and Daisy, we spent a couple of days in Kindwitwi with a party of friends. We had a great time and were made very welcome; to see how everyone coped with life in Kindwitwi was truly inspiring.

The girls greatly enjoyed meeting the Kindwitwi youngsters, as this photo shows:

It was good that we were able to give some small gifts to the kindergarten and to the Ward Patients but we particularly enjoyed seeing the water pump for which my youngest daughter, Daisy, had helped to raise money. This picture shows her operating the pump to irrigate the shambas.

On the Saturday, I played my guitar for the village. Some friends had come up from Dar with sound equipment, so we nailed a microphone to a tree and off we went. I thoroughly enjoyed myself. The experience was unique: having played in a cave in Slovenia and to thousands in San Francisco, never before have I played under a cashew tree nor have I ever shared the stage with a goat. A first time for everything!
